Introduction

Section 77 of and Paragraph 4(f) of Schedule 1 to the Finance Act 2017 introduced a new section - section 986A – into the Taxes Consolidation Act 1997. Section 986A is designed to address the non-operation of PAYE. It applies with effect from 1 January 2018, in respect of the tax years 2018 et seq., in certain circumstances where an employer makes a payment of emoluments to an employee or director, but fails to deduct and remit tax on the emoluments as required under the PAYE system of tax deduction.

This Manual explains the circumstances in which re-grossing will apply, or not apply as the case may be, and the rate at which to re-gross.

1 Overview

Employers who fail to operate statutory PAYE obligations may obtain a payroll cost advantage at the expense of the Exchequer. In addition, the non-operation of the PAYE system may confer an unfair tax advantage on those who receive their emoluments, or part of the emoluments, without PAYE deductions.

Income tax, USC and PRSI collected under the PAYE system are ‘fiduciary taxes’ and there is a statutory obligation on an employer to deduct and remit appropriate amounts to the Collector-General. In that context, it should be noted that the employer’s obligation to remit the appropriate tax exists even in circumstances where the employer fails to make the necessary deductions from emoluments paid.

1.1 What is re-grossing?

The term “re-grossing” refers to the computation of a notional gross pay amount that would have given rise to the actual amount paid after deduction of tax. In cases falling within the provisions of section 986A the employer is liable to pay the amount of tax due in respect of the re-grossed amount of the emoluments (see examples).

2 When will re-grossing occur?

2.1 Circumstances where re-grossing will apply

Re-grossing will apply where:

- there is total non-operation of PAYE by an employer in respect of emoluments to an employee (e.g. all payments to an employee have been paid gross, i.e. without PAYE deductions), or,
- an employer disguises the payment of emoluments. This includes, for example, describing emoluments as invoice payments, advertising expenses, etc. and also includes the payment of emoluments from cash sales or other receipts, discounts or credits, which are omitted from the employer’s books or records and, in respect of which, there may be additional tax liabilities (VAT, income tax, corporation tax).

Note: Emoluments include benefits and perquisites.

Example 1

Mary is employed by ABC DAC but her earnings are not taxed by ABC DAC under the PAYE system. Instead, Mary is simply paid “off the books” in cash.

As there is total non-operation of PAYE by ABC DAC in respect of Mary’s earnings, the payments to her will be treated as a payment of a net amount after deduction of income tax. The net amount is to be re-grossed by reference to the applicable income tax rate.

Example 2

John is employed by XYZ DAC. He is paid on a weekly basis and this income is taxed under the PAYE system. However, John also does overtime, and the overtime is paid in cash to him from unrecorded cash sales. In this case, the employer has disguised by omission the payment of those emoluments and is liable to pay tax on those amounts on a re-grossed basis. The net amount is to be re-grossed by reference to the applicable income tax rate. In these circumstances, it is likely that XYZ DAC will also have tax issues in relation to its undisclosed profits and potentially a VAT liability.

Example 3

Jennifer is employed by STU DAC. She is paid a monthly round sum car allowance but STU DAC processes the payments in the payroll as tax free travel expenses. The company is audited by Revenue and advised that these cash payments are subject to tax under the PAYE system. Following completion of the audit however, the employer continues to classify these payments as tax free travel expenses. As STU DAC is now knowingly misclassifying the emoluments as tax free expenses, the employer is disguising the nature of the emoluments in its records. The emoluments are therefore to be re-grossed by reference to the applicable income tax rate.

2.2 Circumstances where re-grossing will not apply

Re-grossing will be the default position only in the circumstances outlined in Paragraph 2.1. However, section 986A is not intended for situations where genuine or innocent mistakes or errors happen in payroll.

Complete failure to operate PAYE in respect of an employee (i.e. “off the books” employees) will not generally be considered to be a genuine error.

Example 4

Leo is employed by PQR DAC and his employer has taxed his income under the PAYE system. On occasion, Leo has taken a taxi to work and the employer has reimbursed Leo with this cost. As this payment does not meet the requirement of being “expenses incurred wholly, exclusively and necessarily in the performance of the employee’s duties”, the payment should have been taxed on Leo as an emolument. PQR DAC assumed that payment could be made gross. This may be an innocent mistake by the employer and, where the caseworker is satisfied that it was an innocent mistake, re-grossing should not apply. In that scenario, the employer is liable for income tax on the cost of the taxi fares at the employee’s highest rate, together with USC and PRSI.

3 Rate at which to re-gross

Re-grossing will be applied to untaxed emoluments taking account of emoluments that have been subject to PAYE, if any, and the appropriate certificate of tax credits and standard rate cut-off point held by the employer. In the absence of a tax credit certificate, the emergency tax provisions apply. However, where individual taxpayer information is not known, e.g. large numbers of casual workers who are not known to Revenue due to absence of records etc., Revenue will apply the best available information in determining the appropriate rate of tax to apply to re-grossing.

Note – figures have been rounded to the nearest decimal in the following examples.

Example 5

An employer has operated PAYE on an employee's emoluments. The employee's standard rate income tax band and tax credits have been fully utilised against emoluments of €45,000 comprising salary and benefits. During an audit, an additional disguised payment of €1,000 has been identified and re-grossing is to apply. The calculation of the liability is:

Actual payment to employee		1,000
Re-grossed amount (1,000 / (100% – 40%))		1,667
Income Tax	1,667 x 40%	667
PRSI	1,667 x 10.85% (employer)	181
	1,667 x 4% (employee)	67
USC	1,667 x 4.75% (income between €19,372 and €70,044)	79
Total due		994

Example 6

An employer has operated PAYE on an employee's emoluments for 2018 of €34,000 consisting of salary and benefits. The employee's standard rate income tax band for the year is €34,550. During an audit, an additional disguised payment of €1,000 has been identified and re-grossing is to apply.

As €34,000 of this person's total standard rate income tax band of €34,550 has already been utilised against salary and benefits, any additional income up to €550 will be liable to income tax at the standard rate ($€34,550 - €34,000 = €550$). Therefore, when the disguised payment is re-grossed, only €550 of this re-grossed amount is liable to income tax at the standard rate and the excess is liable to income tax at the higher rate.

€550 is the equivalent of €440 re-grossed at the standard rate of income tax (i.e. $€550 \times (100\% - 20\%) = €440$). Therefore, of the total €1,000 disguised payment that is to be re-grossed, €440 of this is re-grossed at the standard rate of income tax. The balance of €560 (i.e. $€1,000 - €440$) is re-grossed at the higher rate of income tax, giving a re-grossed figure of €933. Taken together, the total re-grossed payment is $€550 + €933 = €1,483$.

The calculation of the liability is:

Actual payment to employee			1,000
Re-grossed amount
	$440 / (100\% - 20\%) = 550$
	$560 / (100\% - 40\%) = \underline{933}$		1,483
Income Tax	$550 \times 20\%$	110
	$933 \times 40\%$	373	483
PRSI	$1,483 \times 10.85\%$ (employer)	161
	$1,483 \times 4\%$ (employee)	59	220
USC	$1,483 \times 4.75\%$ (income between €19,372 and €70,044)		70
Total due			773

In this example, as a result of the employee's recorded income being adjusted upwards for the re-grossed payment, the employee has moved from being a standard rate taxpayer to being a higher rate taxpayer.

Example 7

A company car has been provided to an employee. However, the employer has incorrectly recorded the cost of the company car as a staff entertainment expense in its books and records and has not operated PAYE on the benefit. The Revenue caseworker is of the view that this is not a genuine or innocent error and therefore re-grossing is to apply to the disguised payment. The cash equivalent of the car is

€8,100 (original market value of €27,000 x 30%). Assuming the individual is liable to income tax at the higher rate, the calculation of the liability is:

Benefit	8,100
Re-grossed amount (8,100/ (100% – 40%))	13,500
Income Tax 13,500 x 40%	5,400
PRSI 13,500 x 10.85% (employer)	1,465
13,500 x 4% (employee)	540
USC 13,500 x 4.75% (income between €19,372 and €70,044)	641
Total due	8,046

4 Specific circumstances where re-grossing does not apply

Re-grossing does not apply to the following emoluments:

- where an employee is granted a benefit from their employer which forms part of a 'qualifying incentive' within the meaning of section 112B TCA 1997, or
- where the employer has entered into a PAYE settlement agreement with Revenue to discharge the PAYE liability arising on minor and irregular benefits paid to an employee as provided for under section 985B TCA 1997.

5 Granting of credit for tax recovered

With effect from 1 January 2018, the emoluments of an employee will include any re-grossed amount and credit may be granted to an employee for the additional income tax, and where relevant USC, paid by the employer on the re-grossed payment.

In relation to company directors, the position regarding the granting of credit in respect of tax deducted from emoluments is set out in Tax and Duty Manual Part 42-04-59.

6 USC and PRSI

A liability to USC and PRSI arises on the re-grossed amount of emoluments.
